

National Academy of Medicine Action Collaborative on Clinician Well-Being and Resilience

About Network Organizations

Over the past fifty years, rates of clinician burnout have drastically increased across the United States. Clinician burnout has serious consequences for patient safety, care quality, and health care costs. The National Academy of Medicine has launched an Action Collaborative on Clinician Well-Being and Resilience to improve baseline understanding of challenges to clinician well-being, raise visibility of clinician stress and burnout, and elevate evidence-based, multidisciplinary solutions. We invite you to join our national movement as a Network Organization.

What does it mean to be a Network Organization?

By becoming a Network Organization, you are joining a growing network of over 50 organizations that are committed to reversing trends in clinician burnout—a goal that is possible only through the collective action of many stakeholders. Network organizations agree to make a visible commitment to improving the well-being of clinicians. They are active contributors to the work of the Collaborative.

Network Organizations will:

- provide input on activities of the Collaborative
- receive networking and information-sharing opportunities
- receive regular updates on the work of the Collaborative, including priority invitations to public meetings and advance notice of new tools and publications
- receive communications tools such as infographics and social media toolkits
- be listed on the NAM website, along with an organizational “commitment statement” describing their current and/or future work in the area of clinician well-being and a link to your website
- receive invitations to act as partners in building new efforts around clinician well-being at the NAM

We request that Network Organizations:

- participate actively in the work of the Collaborative (e.g., by attending meetings and sharing resources)
- promote announcements about activities of the Collaborative
- support the Collaborative’s social media and public engagement campaigns
- provide semi-annual updates about their work
- send the NAM announcements related to meetings around clinician well-being to be considered for promotion to NAM networks

How to get involved

To become a network organization, please complete our survey at nam.edu/SupportClinicianWellBeing.

You will be asked to include the following information:

- Name of Organization
- A brief “commitment statement” (1-2 pages in Word or PDF format) describing current and/or future work in the area of clinician well-being. This statement will be posted on the NAM website.
- Name and contact information for organization liaison (this information will be made public unless you request otherwise)
