A member of Hudson River Health Care

Brightpoint Health is committed to ending the opiate epidemic in the United States. We are a leading nonprofit provider of integrated health care and social support services to New Yorkers, especially those challenged by poverty, discrimination and lack of access to health care. The people we work with have been especially impacted by opiates and substance misuse.

We commit to offering high quality, evidence-based treatment to the people and communities impacted by opiate use. This includes:

Harm Reduction

Providing harm reduction information, opiate overdose prevention education, and access to naloxone for people who are using opiates, and harm reduction education to family members and people in the communities we serve

Evidence-Based Pain Management

Providing treatment of pain utilizing evidence-based standards of care, following opioid prescribing guidelines, and providing referrals to specialty pain management services as appropriate

Medications for Addiction Treatment

Offering Medications for Addiction Treatment including buprenorphine and naltrexone, which are evidence-based treatments for people living with opiate use disorder.

Psychosocial Support

Offering psychosocial support to those using substances through our substance use treatment programs and behavioral health outpatient services.

Community Partnerships

Partnering with local hospitals in high-use neighborhoods to reduce the impact of opiate-related misdemeanors and health crises through immediate counseling and referrals after arrests and overdoses
