

The Annie Appleseed Project is committed to helping people find simple natural approaches to pain, especially cancer pain. We believe there are in fact, many paths to wellness. We believe that the use of

- a) Acupuncture
- b) Medical Cannabis
- c) Massage
- d) Detox

And many other modalities are worthy of further research. Sadly natural substances and protocols do not receive appropriate funding to conduct Level I clinical trials. However there is a large body of evidence in existence and worldwide, in support.

We are Patient Advocates for people with cancer and do not conduct any direct studies ourselves but we do constantly report on work that has been done.

We have long noted that opioids have been prescribed all too often and for some situations where they are or may be inappropriate. We therefore support this effort as fully as we are able.
